Bringing
music to life

Make your mark

Music makes life worth living.

Music reflects who we are –
it allows us to express ourselves across cultural and linguistic barriers.

In an increasingly fractured world, music strengthens our bonds with each other.

A woman and a man in steampunk attire are standing in a workshop. The woman is on the left, wearing a patterned dress and a corset. The man is on the right, wearing a patterned shirt, a vest, and goggles on his head. They are both looking towards the camera. The background is a workshop with various tools and equipment.

The Schulich School of Music aims to cultivate artistic citizenship, where artistic skills and abilities contribute to the well-being and empowerment of the artists as well as their communities.

Our academic vision

- To shape the future of music
- To nurture artistic and academic excellence that values both tradition and innovation
- To build strong and imaginative connections to multiple disciplines and communities
- To advance well-being through the creative use of music

How will we achieve this?

By offering the highest calibre of teaching and learning, grounded in exceptional performance and research.

And by creating an inclusive and inspiring environment that prioritizes our artists and the communities they serve.

Building bridges with music

Support Artistic Citizenship in Music

The background

In an increasingly fractured world, music can maintain our connection with humanity. Through artistic expression and engagement with society, music has the potential to provide healing and connection.

Your impact

Your philanthropy will help the School support Artistic Citizenship in Music, which will provide opportunities for our students to learn across disciplines and adapt to rapidly evolving social contexts. Graduates need to develop not only critical music skills, but also the self-awareness to identify when skills need to be adapted to changing circumstances.

Our Artistic Citizenship in Music initiatives will help expand the landscape of professional musical education and will include:

- Experiential learning opportunities that can be accessed by all Schulich students
- Off-campus performances to bring our students' talents to the community, both locally and beyond Montreal
- Internships with non-profit artistic societies
- Community teaching experiences

Enriching lives through music

Help strengthen our Partnerships and Outreach program

The groundwork

The Schulich School of Music is rooted in Montreal – a multicultural community with a vibrant and world-renowned music and cultural scene.

Every year, our students' talents are on display in over 700 public events – almost all free – that enrich the lives of tens of thousands of concertgoers.

Your impact

Your support for our Partnerships and Outreach program will increase opportunities for McGill to go into the community, and for the community to come to McGill.

With your help, we will continue to build bridges across disciplinary, geographic and cultural boundaries.
